SCHOOL REPORT.

In presenting to the citizens of the town this, my fifth annual report of schools, I would say that in some of our schools I find decided improvement, while in others I regret to feel obliged to report no perceptible improvement, and still in others a decided failure. This may justly be attributed to several causes, a few of which I will mention. First—Prudential Committees too often hire teachers because they can hire them low. Such are not always the cheapest. Be sure and get first-class teachers when you can. Second—Ill feelings and bickerings between citizens of the district, which are carried into school-meetings and school matters. Third—A laxness in parents and guardians in regard to those over which they have charge, in seeing that they are at school every day regularly, and in time, from the beginning to the close of the term, unless prevented by sickness, whether they like the teacher or not. Fourth—A tendency to find fault with the teachers because they do not make other people's children obey the rules of school, and because they do make theirs. Fifth—A lack of interest as shown by not visiting the schools and seeing for themselves where the fault lies, whether with the teacher or their own children. Sixth—A disposition to censure a teacher with from six to thirty scholars, for not enforcing perfect obedience to the rules of the school, while they cannot—or do not—enforce obedience even at home. My opinion is that children should be made to attend the school while it keeps, and if there is fault with the teachers that causes them to be incompetent to teach the school, apply the proper remedy and have them discharged. If children are allowed to leave the school because they do not like the teacher or some imaginary grievance, they will in a short time stay at home and grow up in ignorance.

From some, or all, of the above causes, our schools have suffered the past year. During the five years in which I have had the oversight of the schools I think I can see the greatest improvement in Districts No. 2 and 9. District No. 1 comes next. No. 10 is still the best school in scholarship and deportment. The citizens in this District are very careful to procure the best teachers, and have been very successful. Owing to sickness and other causes I have not been able to visit all the schools during the winter. Those I have visited have some of them shown good improvement, while others have hardly held their own. The registers are not as carefully filled as they should be, and some of the teachers are careless about returning them in season. Prudential Committees have been careful to notify me of the commencement and close of terms. The whole amount of school money for the year is $1,050. I would again advise the hiring of the same teachers for the school year if good.

I will give the Roll of Honor as returned to me, being those who have not been absent or tardy for the past year: Fred E. Libbey, Walter S. Libbey, John P. Currier, Mary M. Currier, Nellie B. Rollins, Mary E. Pillsbury, Edna Stanyan, Geo. Blood, Willie Radford, Burt A. Brown, Chas. H. Martin, Geo. F. Plummer, Burt O. Witcher, Johnnie W. Witcher.

A reference to the tabular statement on the last page will give you a full understanding of the status of the schools. Districts No. 1, 2 and 9, 8—in winter—and 10, all appeared well at their close. Districts No. 4 and 11 I did not visit at their close in winter, as the scholars left before their teachers. No. 4 in summer appeared well at the opening; at the close I was not in. On the whole I fear the schools have not sustained their standing as compared with the last year. I find by the returns that there have been three Prudential Committees that have visited the schools this year, and many more citizens than in past years. Thanking teachers and scholars who have all, with hardly an exception, shown me the utmost kindness and respect, and hoping that some one may be chosen to fill the place of School Committee more suited to the position, I submit this, my fifth report.

A. M. COGSWELL, School Committee.
